THREAT AGAINST MR. JOEL.

TWO FARRIERS ARRESTED.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Charles Winborn and Arthur Canham, farriers, were charged in a London police court with threatening to kidnap Mr. J. B. Joel, a South African mining magnate, unless they were paid £500.

Remarkable letters were read in Court, showing that the writers posed as members of the "Camerita Monero," a secret society. They informed Mr. Joel that a member of the society had been chosen by lot to assassinate her husband, unless they were paid £500.

On seeing an advertisement in the "Daily Chronicle" agreeing to pay £500, another letter was sent to Mrs. Joel, stating that a man would call for the money at Joel's house. When (anxious) called, the letters, which were addressed to her, were delivered, and Winborn promised him half the money if he assisted.

The accused were remanded, but they were not admitted to bail.

On the completion of the Brooklands track, Mr. Edge applied for permission to open a Napier car on the track, and that he would essay the task of averaging 60 miles an hour for 24 hours. His request was granted, and at the first attempt he succeeded in not only doing the 60 miles an hour for 24 hours, but considerably above it. Since that time he has been the chief drawing card at the Brooklands track, and has been successful in many of the most important races.

LETTER FROM LORD BRASSEY.

LIBERAL POLICY ADVOCATED.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Lord Brassey, in a letter to the "Times," expresses profound satisfaction at the new naval policy of the Admiralty in regard to Australia. He states that the Admiralty's policy is to build a fleet of cruisers to protect the trade routes, and to maintain a strong presence in the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

Lord Brassey suggests that cruisers of the Spartholite, 11,000 tons, or Crescent, 7,700 tons, would be desirable, and advises carrying out the policy ungrudgingly, and to send more than two cruisers if good use can be found for more, also freely to lend officers and instructors in the inaugural stage.

The handling over of the cruisers, Lord Brassey continues, should be done with all the pomp and spectacular effect, of which Sir John Fisher is pastmaster. The vessel should form part of a squadron of our most powerful cruisers to be sent to Australia.
